

Draft of Criteria for GE Distribution List
January 26, 2012

Criteria for GE Distribution List

- The course serves as an introduction to a field of General Education study. This introduction is accomplished by exposing the student to a broad array of concepts essential to understanding the ideas that serve as the foundation of the field.
- The academic content of the course focuses on outcomes that are the foundation of life-long learning and this content is not career specific in nature.
- At least one General Education outcome is embedded in the course and is addressed in-depth.
- The course is not developmental as defined by FMA, transfer institutions and or college catalogue designations.
- The course is offered regularly (meaning at least once every two academic years)

Transfer Statement

- Any new course on the distribution list must provide research/documentation on the transferability of the course to feeder (we are the feeders so receiving) institutions. If research should prove that the course is not transferable, that does not preclude inclusion on the OCC General Education Distribution List.

- Students ARE encouraged to check on course transferability with chosen transfer institution.
