Trustees approve $9.5 million expansion program for campus

Responding to critical facility needs resulting from unprecedented enrollment growth, the Board of Trustees of Rochester College recently approved a dramatic $9.5 million expansion plan for the campus.

"Every square foot of space on the campus that can be redesigned for maximum use has been captured and renovated," stated Dr. Ken Johnson, president of the college. "So far we have been able to accommodate growth through that process, but we have exhausted our options."

Over the past few months, college officials completed an extensive study of projected facility needs as part of the strategic planning process. The resulting report identified several priorities for new construction.

Classrooms and student housing topped the list as the most critical needs required to serve a greater number of students. Offices for new employees, as well as library space, ranked equally high on the list of needs.

"To fully develop our master plan for the campus, we would need $100 million," stated Dr. Johnson. "Consequently, we plan to develop the campus in phases, beginning with the plan recently approved by the board."

Phase one, scheduled to begin within the next few months, includes the construction of two facilities and renovation of three others. Parking areas, athletic fields, and a number of smaller projects also are included in plans for the immediate future.

"We plan to begin construction on the previously-announced academic facility as soon as we receive final approvals from the city," stated Mark VanRheenen, executive vice president. "That facility will house the library and new classrooms."

Work also is scheduled to begin this summer on additional parking for 324 cars and on new soccer and softball fields. College officials plan to begin construction on a 110-student residence hall as soon as design work and approvals can be completed.

"One of the added blessings of any construction is the existing space that can be reassigned after new buildings are occupied," stated Dr. Johnson. "In this case, we will be able to totally renovate the current library building for the College of Extended Learning and classroom space."

In addition to a number of minor projects, phase one will include conversion of the former student center area for the bookstore. The interiors of both the Westside-Central Auditorium and the Science Center will be renovated as well.

"Our last construction project transformed the campus in a re-

Completion of the Isom Atrium and Associates Plaza prepares the college for its next phase of major construction. Projected facilities for the area south of the atrium and plaza, beginning with the academic center, will in time result in an outdoor mall. The atrium and plaza are strategically placed in the center of the mall area. See page 6 for more atrium and plaza photos.

Major Components of Campus Expansion Program

While the expansion program includes a number of minor items, the following major projects are included in current plans:

- Construction of a library and classroom facility
- Construction of a residence hall for 110 students
- Renovation of the current library building for the College of Extended Learning and classrooms
- Interior renovation of the Westside-Central Auditorium
- Interior renovation of the Science Center
- Conversion of the former student center for the bookstore
- Development of new soccer and softball fields
- Construction of additional parking for 324 cars

First phase of campaign targets academic center

College officials recently finalized plans to launch the public phase of a $4.4 million capital campaign at Partnership Dinner on May 12, 2001. Entitled Catch the Vision, the campaign is designed to fund construction of the first phase of a new academic facility and renovation of the existing library building.

"For several months, we have been working with key donors on the silent phase of the campaign," stated Doug Edwards, vice president for development. "The Isom and Ham families provided the cornerstone for that effort when each made $1 million commitments to the campaign."

The Isom commitment included a challenge to friends of the college. By fall, the Board of Trustees, National Advancement Board, and employees each surpassed their individual goals, leaving $1 million to be raised among other groups in order to meet the challenge.

Over the next few months, college personnel plan to conduct individual campaigns among alumni, college friends in three regions, foundations, and the Rochester community. They must meet the challenge goal by March of 2002, and plan to secure the remainder of the campaign funds by the following December.

"We have a great deal of work ahead of us," stated Mr. Edwards. "Fortunately we are going to be able to employ a new director of capital campaigns to help with those efforts as a result of a recent foundation gift."

markable fashion," Dr. Johnson commented. "Within two more years, this $9.5 million expansion will enhance our presence as a quality institution, while allowing us to serve the larger number of students coming our way."

The planned academic facility, which anchors a $9.5 million campus expansion program, will house the college library, a thirty-station computer lab, and five spacious classrooms equipped with full technology.

The Muirhead Library, built in 1965, totals about 5,000 square feet and seats only about one-third the number of persons recommended by the American Library Association. Even with space-saving technologies and media, the library has grown beyond its capacity.

Initially, the library will occupy a little over half of 17,500 square feet in the new academic facility. Seating will triple, and the library will be able to expand into other areas of the building as additional facilities are constructed.

"Our entire academic program will be enhanced by the new construction project," stated Dr. Ken Johnson, president. "It will provide an appropriate hub for the entire campus community."

Plans point to unprecedented progress over next decade

Dear Friends,

All signs indicate that Rochester College is on the verge of substantial progress. The strength of the faculty is increasing rapidly. The scope of academic programs is expanding nicely. The student body is growing in number as fast as we can handle. The infrastructure required to launch new pieces of our strategic plan is falling into place.

We attribute our progress to God's timing. He has assembled a highly-qualified administrative team. He has been sending fantastic persons for our faculty and staff. He is touching the hearts of friends to provide resources to accomplish what He wants done with the college. Our task is to listen responsibly, to consider prayerfully, and to move ahead wisely, making sure that we proceed within His will.

For more than forty years, many have been dreaming of the experiences that all soon will enjoy. During the next decade we shall see more construction on the campus than at any time since the founding decade.

I am pleased that the cooperative spirit among those striving to build a strong Christian college in Rochester is as joyful as the cooperative spirit recorded in Nehemiah 3, where the biblical record tells the names of many persons who accepted responsibility for reconstructing certain sections of the Jerusalem wall, for certain doorways in the wall, for beams and bolts. Nehemiah tells how individuals and groups built towers and gates, or installed locks and bars. Together, the group effort accomplished in a matter of months something that no one could have accomplished alone. When finished, those in the countryside around Jerusalem "realized that the work had been done with the help of God."

Thank you for allowing God to touch your heart and involve your energy and your resources in the building of a fine college that draws young Christians into deep respect for the authority of scripture as their guide in the weightier matters of life.

Cordially,

Kenneth L. Johnson

Foundation approves $246,000 grant

Officials of the Teagle Foundation in New York recently approved a $246,000 grant for Rochester College. Designed to enhance the institution's fund raising efforts, the award will extend over a period of three years.

"Needless to say, everyone on campus is delighted," stated Dr. Ken Johnson, president of the college. "We believe this award will make a significant impact on our efforts and will enhance our image with other foundations as we approach them as well."

The grant will fund two new staff positions in the Development Office and will provide the college with a campaign consultant. Prospects currently are being interviewed to fill roles as director of capital campaigns and director of marketing communication.

"In particular, this grant will help us share the Rochester College story with new constituencies," stated Birgie Niemann, associate vice president for corporate and foundation relations. "The capital campaigns director also will be able to strengthen relations with alumni and current friends of the college."

Mrs. Niemann joined the development staff last fall. Previously, she served as dean of students for Rochester College from 1987 until 1991. She also has worked on the development staff of the University of Iowa Foundation and York College.

"When notifying us about the grant, the president of the Teagle Foundation stated that rarely do they become involved in funding without first meeting the president of the college making the request," stated Dr. Johnson.

"He then went on to say that the materials provided by the college were so outstanding that they were comfortable awarding the grant even though they had not met the college's president", Dr. Johnson continued. "This is an outstanding tribute to Mrs. Niemann and the quality of her work on this project."

"Foundations and corporations make awards as a type of investment," stated Mrs. Niemann. "They expect to see a return, and believe that good things will happen to benefit students as a result of their award. We plan to utilize this grant wisely and make their investment worthwhile."

Choral festival hosted by Rochester

Nearly 300 singers from six institutions participated in the 33rd Christian College Choral Festival on January 6. Rochester College hosted the event for the first time since 1971.

"Although the directors have considered coming our way previously, they hesitated because of the winter weather," stated Joe Bentley, director of music activities. "Since we have participated in the festival faithfully for years, they encouraged us to host the event this year."

At the festival, each group performed two numbers individually. For the finale, a combined festival chorus sang five selections under the direction of Dr. Brazeal W. Dennard, retired supervisor of vocal music for the Detroit Public Schools.

Dr. Dennard's choral groups have appeared at national conventions and on network television. In addition, he has served on a White House committee and participated in congressional hearings on the arts. He arranged two of the pieces performed by the festival chorus.

"The directors were particularly impressed by the audience size," Mr. Bentley stated. "The number of singers on the stage often outnumbers the festival crowd, but we had standing-room only in the Rochester Church of Christ auditorium."

Institutions participating in the festival included Crowley's Ridge College, Faulkner University, Harding University, Lipscomb University, Ohio Valley College, and Rochester College. Some of the institutions brought more than one ensemble.

"Hosting an event of this magnitude requires a lot of help," Mr. Bentley noted. "Dr. Tony Mowrer, who now teaches on our faculty, was a valuable asset since he hosted this event while teaching at Faulkner University."

Robert Martin, a member of the Rochester College Board of Trustees, coordinated housing.

Simone Thomas, Molly Debandt, Debi Shepherd, and Frank Pitts coordinated housing efforts in their individual congregations. Numerous other individuals assisted with publicity, staging, lighting, and sound.

Influence

Alumni of Rochester College continue to make an impact on the world.

For a recent feature on mission efforts in Africa, the Christian Chronicle sought names of emerging church leaders who serve in their own nations. They featured Washington Mhlanga ('72) among six leaders. Washington, director of Zimbabwe Minerals Marketing Corporation, serves as an elder in a local congregation and as a trustee for the Mutare Bible School.

The Chronicle also named Timothy Akpakpan ('66), Nelson Isonguyo ('68), and Stephen Okoronkwo ('66) among those playing major roles in their countries. Timothy and Nelson serve at Nigerian Christian Bible College, and Stephen at Nigerian Christian School.

Members of the Rochester College A Cappella Chorus perform with the festival chorus of nearly 300 singers.

Employee Highlights

Traveling to Marion, Ohio, Dr. Craig Bowman, professor of religion, spoke at a January meeting of ministers from the central region of the state.

Dr. Tony Mowrer, professor of music, recently received an invitation from the North Central Association to serve as a consultant evaluator.

Focus on the Family recently hosted a workshop in Colorado Springs for Christian counselors. Dr. Debra Dahl, who teaches on the adjunct faculty of the college, served as a guest speaker for the event.

Based upon student recommendations, Dr. Michael Westerfield, provost and professor of English, and Dr. David Fleer, professor of religion and communication, will appear in the next edition of Who's Who Among America's Teachers.

Development officers from various Christian colleges gathered in February at Faulkner University. Doug Edwards, vice president for development, spoke at the annual event.

Kent Hoggatt, adjunct instructor of communication, is conducting workshops for local dentists on effective listening skills and conflict management.

Transfer student population grows dramatically

Ten years ago, when Rochester College offered primarily two-year degrees, the institution enrolled sixteen students who had attended other colleges. This year, the number of transfer students reached 207.

"Our successful transition to senior college status has completely changed our role as an educational institution," stated Dr. Ken Johnson, president. "The number of students now transferring to Rochester College far exceeds the number that previously had to transfer to other colleges and universities to complete their studies."

The college began experiencing steady growth in the number of transfer students as the faculty added four-year programs. Following the college name change and establishment of the College of Extended Learning in 1997, the count of transfer students began rising dramatically.

"Every semester, we process transcripts from public and private universities, as well as ones from community colleges," stated Lynne Stewart, registrar. "We work hard to find course equivalents or grant elective credit for transfer work because we expected other colleges to do the same for us for many years."

Last fall, 72 transfer students enrolled in traditional programs, while 135 began their studies in the College of Extended Learning. The College of Extended Learning primarily offers degree completion programs for working adults who have already completed a substantial part of their educational program.

Transfers Bob Bullock and Steven Corp join Brett Cummins and Jason Debandt as hosts at Celebration.

"We probably will enroll over 100 transfer students in our traditional program this fall," stated Larry Norman, vice president for enrollment management. "Many students are just now beginning to discover the college since they no longer assume that we offer only religion degrees."

"We are finding that most of our inquiries from students interested in transferring are referrals from current students," Mr. Norman continued. "Commuters, as well as boarding students who have transferred to Rochester College, are enjoying the academic and spiritual atmosphere of the campus and are sharing that discovery with their friends."

Preaching books edited by professor

ACU Press of Abilene, Texas, recently released the first volume in a new series on biblical preaching. The book, coedited by Dr. David Fleer, professor of religion and communication at Rochester College, grew out of a seminar held on the campus in 1999.

"Apparently, response to the book has been positive," stated Dr. Fleer. "In fact, volume two, based upon last year's seminar, will be released in May."

Dr. Fleer coedited both of the first two volumes with Dr. Dave Bland, associate professor of homiletics at the Harding University Graduate School of Religion. In February, the Christian Chronicle ran a feature on the first volume, Preaching from Luke/Acts.

Volume one includes essays by each of the four speakers who participated in the 1999 seminar, Tim Kelley, Tom Long, Dean Smith, and Greg Sterling. It also includes sermons by John York and David Fleer that use the methods presented at the seminar and in the first half of the book.

"This volume comes from player coaches," stated Harold Shank, minister of the Highland Street Church of Christ in Memphis. "They are scholars, who as coaches, see the big picture and understand the role of preaching. They are also preachers who, as players, know the strain and challenge of the game."

The second volume, Preaching from Autobiography in Paul's Letters, will feature essays by Carl Holladay, Carson Reed, Andre Resner, and John York, speakers at the 2000 seminar. Mark Love and Mark Frost prepared the sermons for volume two.

"ACU Press has promoted the series fairly extensively," stated Dr. Fleer. "They have advertised in the Journal for Preaching and have sent flyers to members of the Academy of Homiletics, a professional organization of those who teach preaching."

Building the Infrastructure of the Kingdom knowledge ~ jobs

God has a lot of projects going, and He has good people working in all of them! When God's seed is planted in the hearts of His own, old but good projects are sustained even as new good projects are begun. Because God is so creative and so industrious, the bottom line (as I see it) is that God has far more projects than He has people.

Part of each Christian's responsibility is to help diminish the shortage of workers. We try to do that by preparing young hearts to hear God's call to give their lives to His service, spending their energy, their resources, and their creativity on His projects. For some - young and old alike - whom God calls, that project will be Rochester College, and we shall be grateful. For others, it will be something else, equally or perhaps more important on God's list of projects.

Eli didn't hear God speak to Samuel, but as Eli watched and listened, Eli had no doubt that Samuel was in touch with God. We may not be ready to commit our energy, our money, our time, and our life to the call that another hears, yet we commend all who learn to sacrifice for the Kingdom. Dr. J

Newspaper redesigned as The Shield

Members of the campus community have enjoyed reading a revitalized student newspaper since the opening of the fall semester. Each issue has captured the attention of readers.

"It has been exciting to be involved with the production process," stated Lora Isenberg, new sponsor of the paper. "We are building a better publication each time the paper is printed."

Originally bearing the name

North Star, the student newspaper disappeared for several years. It resumed publication during the 1994-95 academic year and has been printed since that time under the name Tomahawk, Warrior Warpath, and The Point.

"Before the year began, we decided to restructure the paper with the four sections that are common to most student newspapers: news, features, opinions, and sports," stated Mrs. Isenberg.

"We then decided to sponsor a contest to rename the paper."

"We were looking for a name that would reflect the college's mission, goals, and mascot," Mrs. Isenberg continued. "We also wanted to find a name that would stick for a long time."

The Warrior mascot changed from an Indian theme to a Christian Warrior theme in 1997. Consequently, the newspaper staff selected The Shield as the official name for the student newspaper. The masthead displays a shield bearing a cross.

"Response to the paper has been very positive," Mrs. Isenberg noted. "Like most colleges, the voice provided in the opinion section is a popular feature. We wanted a paper that would foster discussion on the issues and that seems to be happening."

A former college newspaper editor herself, Mrs. Isenberg worked for a magazine and edited the news bulletin of Pepperdine University after college. She then taught journalism and advised the student newspaper at Oklahoma Christian University.

Mrs. Isenberg moved to Michigan after marrying Dan Isenberg, a 1982 graduate of Rochester College. She also teaches specialized writing and journalism courses for the college.

Justin Robinson and Amanda Brownlee read the latest student paper.

Options added at Macomb and Mott

Interest at both extension centers operated by Rochester College recently resulted in the addition of new options at each of the sites. Beginning in the fall, an evening program will become available at the Macomb location, and a major in business communication at the Mott site.

"Community college students often pile up as many as 100 credits and need a flexible degree completion program," stated Debi Hoggatt, program director. "Our business communication major allows students to complete a bachelor's degree with minimal loss of credit."

Rochester College began offering the business communication major at the Macomb location in the fall of 2000. The addition of a second facility at the University Center is making it possible for the college to add an optional evening track along with the current weekend program.

"We expect the business communication major to meet similar needs at Mott," stated Tracey Hebert, dean of the College of Extended Learning. "Officials at Mott are extremely excited about this new opportunity for their students."

At both university centers, the college must offer programs that are not available from other partner institutions. Currently, Rochester College also offers a major in early childhood education on the Mott campus in Flint.

"Most of our Macomb students are coming to us as referrals from the Macomb counseling staff," noted Mrs. Hoggatt. "Their counselors like our program."

"We also are enrolling a number of working adults who have done well in their profession but need a bachelor's degree for career advancement," Mrs. Hoggatt continued. "These are bright students who are doing extremely well in the classroom."

Both the Macomb and Mott programs operate under the oversight of the College of Extended Learning. Offering their first classes for working adults in the summer of 1997, the division enrolled over 300 students for the spring semester.

"We are now graduating students on a regular basis," stated Mr. Hebert. "Based upon inquiries, however, we expect continued growth in enrollment."

Molding Futures ....

Ronald Cox, Jennifer Hamilton, and Gordon MacKinnon

Good instructors are at the heart of a quality academic program. The lives of students at Rochester College are molded not only through strong experiences in the classroom, but by individual attention and personal relationships with instructors. Some of the outstanding faculty members that serve the students of Rochester College are introduced below.

Recently finishing course work for his doctorate from Notre Dame University, Ronald Cox, assistant professor of religion, joined the faculty of Rochester College in January of this year. He obtained his bachelor's degree from California Polytechnic State University and his master's from Pepperdine University. While pursuing his doctorate, he directed the adult education program at the Donmoyer Avenue Church of Christ and preached in several area congregations.

After completing her bachelor's degree at Columbia Christian College, Jennifer Hamilton, assistant professor of English, taught at private schools in New Jersey and Oregon. Her family lived in Scotland for a year, where she completed a master's degree and became a doctoral candidate at the University of Aberdeen. Jennifer and her husband, Rex, both joined the faculty of Rochester College in the fall of 1999.

Completing bachelor's degrees at both Rochester College and Oakland University in 1981, Dr. Gordon MacKinnon, associate professor of psychology, began his career as a youth and family minister. After completing a master's degree at Wayne State University, he worked as a psychologist in outpatient clinics. In 1989, he opened a private practice and began doctoral studies. He has served as staff psychologist for the Havenwyck Adolescent Treatment Center for the past five years. He began teaching classes at Rochester College on a part-time basis in 1997, and joined the full-time faculty in January.

Faculty Openings

Adjunct faculty members are needed in the College of Extended Learning. Most CEL courses meet one time per week, primarily in the evening or on Saturdays. Candidates must have a master's or doctoral degree and are contracted for each course taught.

Instructors are needed in accounting/finance, business/management, communication, computer-related fields, early childhood education, English, fine arts, math, and science (biology and/or chemistry).

Applicants should contact Tracey Hebert, dean of the College of Extended Learning, at 248.218.2200 or thebert@rc.edu.

Worth Repeating

"I just wanted you to know how much your classes have made a difference in my views on society. They taught me a respect for those who are different, those who are poor, and those who are uneducated. Previously, I thought those things just happen and there is nothing you can do. Now I know different. I feel so blessed that I can make a difference in someone else's life from what I have learned." - from a student in the traditional program to one of her professors in the Psychology Department.

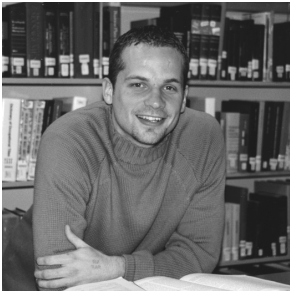

"I really miss our Biblical literature class. When I read the Bible now, I read it with more understanding of the times and culture of Jesus. I've also heard this from so many of the students. They say they did not expect to get anything out of the class, but left the class with a new respect and wonder for God." - from a student in the College of Extended Learning to her professor.

"I'm going to start substitute teaching next Tuesday. If I like it, I will get a master's degree. You planted seeds that are helping me be the wife and mother I need to be. Thank you for setting this example. I pray that I can pass your kindness on to my children and to the children that I work with." - from a 2000 psychology graduate to a former professor.

"I never really had the opportunity to explore the Bible. The Jesus I never knew was introduced in this class. I look at Jesus in a different light now. I look at Him as a friend walking next to me. I still have much to learn about Him and want to continue to develop and strengthen my relationship with Him." - from a student in the College of Extended Learning to a professor.

Why RC?

Why does Rochester College exist? Because of students like Josh Graves, a junior history major from Chesterfield, Michigan.

Josh has played basketball since enrolling at Rochester College. In addition, he has served as the spiritual life intern on campus.

"When you grow up in a public school, you are bombarded with worldly teachings and morals," Josh stated. "It has been refreshing to be around Christians on an every day basis."

Since he almost majored in Christian ministry, Josh recently decided to work as an intern with the Rochester Church of Christ during the next academic year. In that capacity he will be serving as a part-time campus minister.

Celebration marks twenty-fifth year of tradition

Chronicling important events of the 1976-77 academic year, a writer for the student yearbook stated, "Shouts of exuberance rang from the cafeteria on April 22 and 23. Through concentrated efforts of students and faculty, the first annual Celebration in Song took place."

Though the participants, program, and location of Celebration have changed over the years, the tradition has not. On March 16-17, the students of Rochester College once again delighted another audience, this time marking the twenty-fifth annual Celebration weekend.

"The amount of talent and creativity displayed at Celebration over the years has been remarkable," stated Lynne Stewart, who has witnessed every production since 1977. "It is even more amazing when one realizes that the show is made possible by such a broad spectrum of people."

"You assume the drama and music students are involved," Mrs. Stewart continued. "Yet hundreds of others who normally would never get near a stage, from athletes to the shy and quiet types, do the most unpredictable things for Celebration."

The first Celebration, staged in the cafeteria area, did showcase the best music and drama talent on campus. Yet, Dr. Don Gardner, president of the college at that time, wanted much more. By the second year, the program not only moved to the newly-constructed

Westside-Central Chapel, but featured the campus social clubs.

"Celebration builds a sense of community on campus," stated Frank Pitts, music director for the show and a former Celebration host. "While the competitive edge of intramural club sports continues throughout the year, the clubs all pull together for Celebration, wanting to see everyone do well."

From year to year, different features have carried the show. Some years, the hosts and hostesses have been the highlight.

Other years, the Celebration ensemble or the social clubs have provided the flair.

"I have always enjoyed the big ensemble numbers the most," stated Mrs. Stewart. "I like to see lots of people on the stage. The effect is very dramatic."

Celebration embraced a new tradition in 1999, when the producers began weaving a Christian theme throughout the program. The following year, Celebration moved to the auditorium of the Rochester Church of Christ to improve staging and to accommodate larger audiences.

"Using the church building allows us to do more with technical effects," stated Mr. Pitts. "Our lighting improved dramatically last year, and we used interactive video this year."

Undoubtedly, Celebration will continue to evolve in the future. As long as the tradition lasts, however, Celebration will continue to delight audiences and bond the campus community.

Celebrate!

PARTICIPATION

Year after year, more students are involved in the preparation of Celebration than any other campus event. Compared to other annual programs, it also draws the largest number of guests to the campus.

HOSTS/HOSTESSES

Seventy-six individuals have hosted Celebration since establishment of the role in 1978. Three students, Mark Davison (80, 81, 84), Steven Bruce (95, 96, 98), and Holly Johnson (96, 98, 99) each hosted three productions. Gary Cummins served with the first hosts and hostesses in 1978. His son, Brett, hosted this year's production.

Enhancing the Campus

Two long-awaited campus projects culminated during the past few months with completion of the Isom Atrium and the first phase of the Associates Plaza. Funded by Gerald and Lucille Isom of Penn Valley, Pennsylvania; Gary and Rosemary Carson of Clarkston, Michigan; and the Associates, the atrium houses the Solid Rock Cafe and will provide additional social space for the campus community. The atrium is located in a high-traffic area in front of the Westside-Central Auditorium.

Just outside the entrance of the Isom Atrium, the Associates Plaza provides a campus focal point for an area that in time will serve as an outdoor mall. The names of scores of individuals are engraved in the plaza bricks and on plaques installed on the plaza benches and flagpoles. The Associates plan to add more engraved bricks in phases as the bricks are purchased by other individuals.

Both the Isom Atrium and the Associates Plaza provide new social space on the campus of Rochester College. Their strategic location and attractive appearances will ensure frequent use by the campus community for many years in the future.

Reunions

Class of 1991
July 20-21, 2001
Rochester College

Attention class of 1991. A ten-year reunion is scheduled for this summer. A committee of class members has planned activities, so plan to attend! Contact your friends and make sure they are planning to come. For further information contact Boise Walker at boisewalker@hotmail.com.

Summer of 2002

Coordinators are needed to plan summer reunions for the classes of 1962, 1972, 1982, and 1992. Volunteers normally schedule, organize, and promote reunions. College officials provide lists and mailing labels of class members, schedule campus facilities, and provide guidance for reunion planners. If you would be interested in assisting with reunion planning, please contact Larry Stewart at 800.521.6010 (option 4) or lstewart@rc.edu.

Fall workshops planned

Two fall workshops featuring noted authors have been scheduled in conjunction with the annual lectureship. Both workshops are based upon books written by each of the presenters.

On Friday, October 19, Dr. Nick Stinnett, a noted researcher from the University of Alabama, will present a workshop on family strengths. Based upon his latest book, Fantastic Families, Dr. Stinnett will share powerful steps for building strong families.

In the largest study ever conducted on strong families, Dr. Stinnett recently completed a twenty-five year research project on over 14,000 families. Fantastic Families, coauthored with Dr. Stinnett's wife, Nancy, and Joe and Alice Beam, reveals the results of that study.

Tim Woodroof, a minister from Nashville, Tennessee, will conduct a church growth seminar on October 19 and 20 based upon his latest book, The Church that Flies. The Saturday portion of the seminar will be a lectureship class.

"Tim comes from a preaching family, which includes his father and his grandfather," stated Elton Albright, director of the seminar. "I have known him for years and he is a great speaker."

Each year, the college provides a variety of workshops. They cover such topics as leadership training, church growth, and sermon preparation.

"We feel it is important for us to provide learning opportunities for everyone associated with the college," Mr. Albright noted. "Our workshops are designed to fortify faith in individuals and to help build stronger churches."

Mark Your Calendar!

Two exciting workshops will precede Lectureship weekend for the first time this year. Plan now to visit campus and benefit from an incredible weekend!

Do you need a will?

The obvious answer is that you absolutely need a will to determine where your possessions will go after your death. Otherwise, your state of residence has a plan for your estate.

My wife and I see our will as another opportunity for stewardship of what God has given to us. Many people, like us, will want to leave something for children or grandchildren, but many will leave at least a portion for a local church or a para-church ministry. Christian colleges, like Rochester College, need friends to endow their important work through estate gifts.

Sadly, nearly seventy percent of all Americans die without a will in place. This complicates the probate process for those family members left to deal with the problems. It may also mean heavy tax consequences. Consider taking the following steps.

First, spend some time determining the value of your total estate by sorting through your personal property and assets. Many people find their estate is larger than they imagined when they include their home, life insurance, and retirement plans.

Secondly, find a lawyer and/or estate planner, with charitable estate planning experience, whom you can trust to put together a plan for your estate. At the minimum, you likely will want to draw up a will, but your planner may suggest some other options such as a trust or a family foundation.

Please call me at 800.521.6010 (option 4) if I may provide possible charitable ideas, answer questions, or refer you to someone who may help in the process.

Five selected to serve with Trustees

Continuing to build leadership for the new century, the Board of Trustees of Rochester College recently added five members to its ranks. Terms of service for each individual began at the last quarterly board meeting.

Scott Cottrill of Fort Wayne, Indiana, is an operations support manager at Guardian Industries. He has served on the college Development Council and as a Partnership Dinner chairman. Mr. Cottrill and his wife, Melissa, are members of the East Allen County Church of Christ, where he serves as a deacon, Bible class teacher, and song leader.

"A strong college in the North strengthens the church," stated Mr. Cottrill. "My three sons need an option for a progressive, world-class, Christian university in the North, and I have twelve years to help build one!"

A Partnership Dinner promoter and father of a Rochester College student, Tom Duncan of South Lyon, Michigan, works in land development and management. With experience as a member of the South Lyon Board of Education, he also is assisting with the formation of a new university in Africa. He serves as an elder of the South Lyon Church of Christ, where he and his wife, Joanne, are members.

"The transition from a teenager living at home to responsible adulthood is the most critical period in each of our lives," Mr. Duncan noted. "If I can be of help to young people by providing them with a wholesome, Godly atmosphere during those crucial years, I will gladly serve."

Rich Richardson of Mokena, Illinois, is the owner of Richardson Products, Inc. A coach of community sporting events, he also teaches Bible classes on a regular basis and is active in evangelistic efforts. Mr. Richardson and his wife, Gena, are members of the Park Forest Church of Christ in Matteson.

"I hope to contribute to an environment which develops young people to become educated, committed disciples, not simply nice, successful churchgoing members of the community," stated Mr. Richardson.

Lora Schwab of Saline, Michigan, is the president and CEO of Statprobe, Inc., one of the nation's largest research organizations that works with pharmaceutical, biotechnology, and medical device companies. Dr. Schwab and her husband, Don, are active members of the Ann Arbor Church of Christ.

"I believe in the vision of Rochester College," Dr. Schwab commented when asked why she decided to serve on the Board of Trustees. "That vision provides students a higher education with a Christian focus that helps equip them for life."

The chief deputy financial officer for Wayne County, Carla Sledge of Franklin, Michigan, is active as a representative of the college and as a member of several community organizations. In 1999, she received the Most Influential Black Women in Metropolitan Detroit Award and the NABA Award for Achievement in Government. Mrs. Sledge and her husband, Willie, are members of the Russell Woods Church of Christ.

"I am involved with the college board to utilize my experience in finance," Mrs. Sledge stated. "It is a means of giving back as I have been blessed."

Lectureship adopts weekend format

Building upon a tradition that started a year before the college opened, the lectureship committee recently announced new plans for the college's oldest annual program. Those changes will occur when the lectureship takes place this fall on October 19-21.

"Many individuals have attended the lectureship since it began," stated Doug Edwards, chairman of the committee. "As time has gone on, however, most younger families have not established that tradition."

"Busy schedules and the fact that both husband and wife work in many families makes it hard for most to attend during the day," Mr. Edwards continued. "Consequently, full-time church leaders and senior citizens now make up most of our daytime crowds."

After considering numerous options, the lectureship committee decided to reformat the lectureship into a weekend schedule. The revised program will open on Friday evening, run throughout the day on Saturday, and end on Sunday morning.

In order to give the lectureship a fresh identity, the committee selected a new designation for the weekend, Impact: A Conference for Seeking the Way, the Truth, and the Life. Each year, the program will center around a theme as in past years.

"Even though we will still refer to the program as the lectureship, we hope the name Impact will be appealing to the younger generation," stated Mr. Edwards. "Many young professionals attend conferences on a regular basis, so they likely will identify with the terminology."

In addition to packing a number of dynamic speakers into the weekend program, the committee also recommended that one or two workshops be held on campus just prior to the opening of the lectureship.

"Scheduling some of our workshops during the same time period will bring more people to the campus and give everyone the opportunity to participate in a multifaceted weekend," Mr. Edwards noted. "Additionally, we will be able to use some of the outstanding speakers that come for our workshops in the lectureship program."

This fall, Mike Cope of Abilene, Texas, will open Impact with the theme Glory on the Mountain. Classes will be available on Saturday, and that evening will include the annual Friends Dinner and another keynote address. The lectureship will conclude with worship the next morning.

Associates

Mary Wooten, a member of the class of 1982, recently assumed new responsibilities on behalf of the Associates. Since 1985, the group has collected redemption points at Bill Knapps Restaurants to purchase items for the college. Mary's mother, Margaret Hadfield, coordinated that effort until her recent death.

Accepting the project, Mary stated, "I am honored to 'take the torch' and carry on my mother's great love for this college and the wonderful ladies who so lovingly have given their time and talents for many years."

Donor list includes every class

Representatives from every graduating class appeared on the list of donors that contributed to Rochester College during 2000. The college recently employed an individual to develop grant proposals for foundations. Since alumni participation is critical to that process, the college is striving to increase the number of alumni who give during 2001.

NEWS BULLETIN OF ROCHESTER COLLEGE

VOLUME 42 NUMBER 2 SPRING 2001

Enrollment sparks strategic planning

Enrollment played a major role in a recent review of the strategic plan for Rochester College. Rapid growth over the past four years necessitated significant adjustments to earlier planning.

"Just two years ago, we completed an update that projected enrollment for the fall of 2000 at 668," stated Dr. Ken Johnson, president. "Instead, our enrollment hit 830 last fall."

The 1999 strategic plan identified an athletic center as the college's highest priority for new construction. The revised plan places that facility a little further down the list.

"While our needs for an athletic center are great," stated Dr. Johnson, "we are nearing capacity in our classrooms and residence halls. We are at the point where we must limit enrollment or build."

In order to meet pressing facility needs, the trustees approved a $9.5 million campus expansion project at their January meeting. That approval addresses the first phase of the facility portion of the revised strategic plan.

Flags flying high above the Associates Plaza include a new college flag.

"By starting on our new facilities goals in the near future, we can reasonably project a student body of 1,500 by the fall of 2005," Dr. Johnson noted. "Other portions of the revised plan will enhance our ability to serve students as well."

Within the next five years, college officials are projecting approval of the teacher certification program, as well as a new major in general science and a summer studies program in Europe. Recent additions to the faculty have allowed planners to move the target date for a master's program in religion several years earlier than originally expected.

Technology again surfaced as a priority in the new strategic plan. Immediate plans call for the addition of DALNET services in the library and swipe-card technology over the campus. Through DALNET, the library's holdings will be fully integrated with a consortium of more than twenty college and public libraries in southeast Michigan.

Concurrent with construction of the second phase of a new academic facility, the college plans to add a community music school. The school will utilize area professional musicians, music teachers, and Rochester College music majors to teach music lessons to local residents.

"Our task is to discern prayerfully and plan responsibly as we work to raise every standard to which we aspire for the college and our students," Dr. Johnson commented. "We feel good about the process we have been through and are excited about the direction we are heading."

Decade of Progress

Rochester College has made remarkable progress over the past ten years. Senior college status is now assumed. The college has renovated most facilities, constructed a residence hall complex and atrium, and rebuilt roadways and parking areas. Planning is complete for a decade of even greater growth!
